THE WEST

VIOLENT BATTLE

NEAR VERDUN.

TERRIFIC CONTEST.

CROWN PRINCE'S EFFORT.

Violent fighting is taking place on a 25-mile front in the Verdun region on the western front.

The Germans are attacking with seven army corps. They have made some headway, but at the cost of very heavy losses.

The battle is described as the greatest since the Battle of Loos.

French military experts are not anxious, and hope that the Germans will continue the attacks.

The Czar was present at a thanksgiving service in Petrograd for the Russian victory at Erzerum.

The Duma was subsequently opened amid scenes of unparalleled enthusiasm.

Lord Robert Cecil has been appointed to the new portfolio of Minister for the Blockade.

Mr. Hilaire Belloc says that a study of the best sources of information in Europe proves that the Germans killed to the end of 1915 exceeded 1,000,000.

GREAT BATTLE.

IN THE WEST.

GERMANS ATTACKING.

HEAVY LOSSES.

LONDON, Feb. 23.

A Paris communique states: "We captured some parts of the trenches at Bois de Greny. Infantry engagements northward of Verdun at night time developed over a front of 15 kilometres. Violent fighting is progressing from the right bank of the Meuse to the south-east of Verdun. We evacuated the village of Haumont, which we retain in the outskirts, after a desperate fight, in which we inflicted very heavy losses. A counter-attack eastward of that point enabled us to retake the greater part of the Bois de Greny in the salient occupied by the enemy on Tuesday."

Our certain of first stopped a strong German attack, which was directed against Serre Bois.

According to prisoners certain units have been annihilated.

A later communique says: "Seven German army corps are engaged in the Verdun battle, which is increasing in intensity on a twenty-five mile front. There are extremely heavy German losses."

The Paris "Temps" says that the German attacks on the advanced lines at Verdun are being carried out on a five kilometre front in order to capture Haumont, but the attack is a big mouthful, and is now reinforced with field forces under General Humbert, a most energetic leader.

GROWING INTENSITY.

PARIS, Feb. 24.

The following communique has been issued: "The German attack north of Verdun developed, as was foreseen, into a most important action, for which powerful preparation had been made."

The battle continued with growing intensity, and was vigorously maintained by our troops, who inflicted extremely heavy losses on the enemy."

There was a ceaseless bombardment which extended from Malancourt (west of the Meuse and north-west of Verdun) to Etain (about 16 miles east of Haumont). Our artillery replied with equal violence."

Successive German infantry attacks, lasting all the day long, were met by our troops, who repulsed them with heavy losses. The enemy penetrated Waville Wood, east of Caures, after a series of sanguinary attacks."

Our counter-attacks stopped the enemy's assaults north of Ornes."

CROWN PRINCE'S OBJECTIVE.

An evening communique shows that the Verdun battle is the most important since the Battle of Loos and the Champagne battle. It is likely to equal the German offensive at Ypres in April."

The latest unofficial news shows that there has been a tendency recently largely to increase the Fifth Army, General von Strantz's four army corps from five to six. The Crown Prince's original force has also been specially reinforced by five divisions, and an immense quantity of artillery, for the present attack."

The Crown Prince's immediate objective is not the fortress of Verdun, but the earthworks which General Sarrail constructed upon the heights of the Meuse prior to the battle of the Marne, sweeping from Vaux-la-Petite (south-west of Verdun) and crossing the Meuse at St. Mihiel, and thence to Etain, Fresnois (south-east of Verdun), and back to St. Mihiel."

The whole region consists of wooded hills and ravines."

After a heavy bombardment a series of infantry attacks commenced about 10 a.m. The German assault being made in the Bremer Woods, at Haumont and Serre Bois, on a front of two and a half miles."

CAPTURE OF TRENCHES.

The Germans have succeeded in occupying a horseshoe-shaped trench, about 100 yards long. Elsewhere the Germans were unable to get started in their assaults, owing to the impenetrable barrage of fire with which the artillery of the Third French Army punished the attackers."

The French losses were small during the capture of the first line. The important factor was that the Germans knew that the front trenches could readily be broken down by bombardment. After capturing the trenches the Germans suffered largely from the French fire, but were promptly and largely repulsed."

The defenses of Verdun are so strong that the French experts are not anxious. They are, indeed, hopeful that the Germans will continue the attack, which they attribute to the Crown Prince's desperate desire to refresh his faded laurels."

GERMAN COMMUNIQUE.

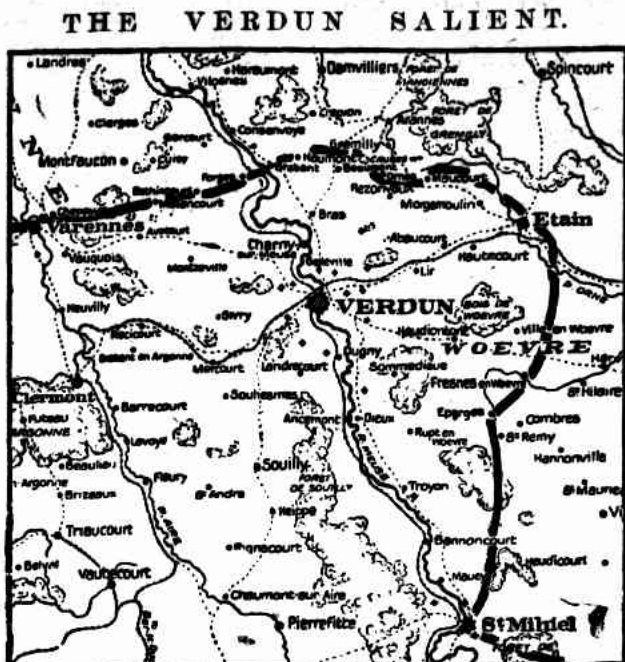

A German communique says: "We attacked north of Verdun on the 23rd. The trenches were penetrated in two and three quarters. We captured 3000 prisoners and considerable war material."

It is reported from Rotterdam that after their great losses on the 23rd the Germans commenced their attack on the 24th and launched several attacks south of La Bassee. Assailed by a favourable wind, the Germans swept volumes of gas over the French trenches, occupying portions at a heavy cost. The French seventy-five torpedoes in the air, which they directed against the new road made by the Germans behind the line."

THE BALKANS.

ROUMANIA.

A report from Bucharest says there is much comment upon the King having received in audience M. Pilipec and M. Take Joneau, whom he called upon in the beginning of April, finishing at the end of July.

The heavy black line gives an approximate idea of the battle-front as it curves round the fortress of Verdun. The map is drawn to a scale of about seven miles to the inch.

PEACE TALK.

MR. ASQUITH REPLIES.

NO CHANGE OF POLICY.

THE ONLY POSSIBLE TERMS.

LONDON, Feb. 23.

In the House of Commons to-day Mr. P. Snowden, on the motion for the second reading of the Consolidated Loan Bill, initiated a peace discussion. He asked whether or not it was possible to end the war on terms and conditions which would realise the objects for which we are fighting. He had no doubt about the disinterested motives and promptings of people who supported the war and did not desire an inconclusive peace. The menace of militarism must be removed. Some people believed this could be secured without waiting for a decisive victory, which would enable us to dictate terms to the vanquished foe. It was impossible for the Allies to achieve a crushing victory, and it was still less possible for the Central Powers to do so. Even if we were able to crush Germany by force and economic exhaustion, he asked, was that the best foundation for a lasting settlement? The Government should state more definitely the terms upon which it would consider peace."

Mr. C. P. Trevelyan remarked that both Mr. Asquith and Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg had let it be known they were ready to consider peace proposals put forward by the Germans, but neither would take the first step."

PREMIER'S STATEMENT.

Mr. Asquith said he was glad the House had listened to the two speeches patiently. He did not like it to go forth to the world that the speakers were spokesmen for any substantial body of opinion in this country. He doubted whether either spoke for his own constituents. They certainly did not speak for the democracy in Britain. Mr. Snowden had said we had reached a condition of stalemate. It was a matter of opinion, and time would show whether or not he was right, but that estimate of the situation was not his. Then, Mr. Snowden had said if we obtained victory it could only lead to an inconclusive peace. He (Mr. Asquith) did not believe in the full terms of settlement laid down in his (Mr. Snowden's) speech. Until such a peace was within sight, would any of our Allies share one jot of the prosecution of the war? (Loud cheers.) Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg appeared to have said he would welcome proposals from other quarters, and then told his fellow-deputies that Germany had not shown herself the enemy of small nations."

DECLARATION RENEWED.

This was the German, Mr. Asquith continued, who had annihilated, devastated Belgium—the Germany who had done her best to annihilate and devastate Serbia, Montenegro, and Poland. Such a statement as that of the German Chancellor under such conditions was one of colossal and shameful audacity. He would be surprised if the German people were not ashamed of their own Government's conduct. He would be surprised if the German people were not ashamed of their own Government's conduct. He would be surprised if the German people were not ashamed of their own Government's conduct."

THE BLOCKADE.

DEBATE CONCLUDED.

STATEMENT BY LORD CREWE.

LONDON, Feb. 24.

In concluding the debate on the blockade question, Lord Crewe, leader of the Liberal party in the House of Lords, said that the fleet was hampered in its work.

The questions of the blockade, he added, were complicated by difficulties that could not be revealed. Britain must uphold its international law, for which purpose she had embarked upon the war.

Lord Crewe withdrew his motion: "That in conformity with the principles of national law and legitimate neutral rights, a more effective use should be made of the Allied fleets to prevent essentials reaching the enemy."

With regard to the liquor question in New South Wales, said the Minister for Defence to-day, "as I stated on Wednesday, the order to close hotels at 6 o'clock is an emergency notice. It is not to be regarded as permanent."

SENATOR PEARCE'S LETTER.

ADVICE TO THE STATE GOVERNMENT.

The letter regarding the early closing of hotels sent by Senator Pearce, in his capacity as a temporary measure to extend the closing hour for hotels affected by the recent proclamation from 8 o'clock p.m. to 8 o'clock p.m.

While not suggesting any precise hour at which the sale of intoxicants should be discontinued, it is desirable that in your State Government should follow the example of other States and pass legislation, and that a time for closing should be fixed sufficiently early to afford time for the collection of emergency funds, which is generally 11 o'clock. The Premier yesterday handed Senator Pearce's letter out for publication, without making any comment upon it.
